RABAT ROYAL AND IMPERIAL CAPITAL FOUNDED IN 1150 BY SULTAN ABDEL MOUMEN

Rabat is the political and administrative capital of Morocco and the most royal of the imperial cities and the fourth.

It is a pleasant and cosmopolitan airy city, pierced by wide avenues, it houses, the Royal Palace.

Rabat has a rich historical past as evidenced by the Necropolis of Chellah and the Kasbah of the Oudayas. Founded in 1150 by the great Sultan Abdel Moumen, who built a citadel that became the Kasbah of the Oudayas. It was his son Yacoub El Mansour who ordered the construction of immense ramparts that took part in the city's current cachet. Its strategic location was a compulsory point between the North and the South of the country. The influx of Andalusian refugees after the expulsion of King Philip III of Spain at the beginning of the XVII century, gives a surplus of dynamism to the city.
